Description

This breakout timing drill incorporates two forwards. Again the timing for the forwards is critical. The forwards need to time their release so they are receiving flat passes. When forwards get too far ahead then they have to receive vertical passes which get dangerous and inconsistent. In this drill especially, the centers tend to get up ice too quick which leaves him vulnerable when receiving a verticle pass from the wing. Once the play is finished, the defense receives a pass out of the corner from the coach, walks to the middle, and rips a shot low and on net. The forwards can stay in front of the net for a screen, tip, and rebound.
