Category #1 : Forward Drills

Category #2 : Neutral Zone

Title : Transition passing sequence #1

Content elements :

Components:

Key points :

Description

This hockey drill is the first in a sequence of a handful that work on passing and receiving in the neutral zone as well as attacking the offensive blue line. The first sequence is pretty simple. Set up four lines, one on each neutral zone face off dot as shown. The lines that are diagonal from each other will go at the same time. On the whistle the first player in line passes to the lin in front of them and skates forwards towards the other line. The player opens up and transitions towards the boards to receive a flat (horizontal) pass from the player they just passed the puck to. The player who is transitioning should try to face the puck the entire time, call for the puck, and receive the pass heading up ice. After receiving the pass the player attacks the blue line with speed and takes a long shot on net.